

GOTHAM SCHOOLS PLAN PROTESTANT RELIGION COURSE

New York, January 30.—Plans for week-day schools for the religious instruction of protestant children in New York city were under consideration today by a committee appointed at a meeting of 400 protestant clergymen.

Resolutions advocating the establishment of such schools were adopted after an address by Judge Thomas C. T. Crain, of general sessions, who declared that half a million protestant children here were entirely without religious instruction. He said 6,000 members of the Protestant Teachers' association had consented to go, after their own school hours, to the schools to be established, and teach the children.

The course of instruction will be determined by denominational boards. The amount agreed upon by the department of justice and the receiver for the Lincoln Motor Car company, in settlement of the government's claim for alleged over-payments on war contracts, is $1,550,000, according to William Ritter, assistant attorney-general, who said today, however, that this figure was subject to the approval of Judge Tuttle, of the federal court at Detroit.

Refuse Immigrants Privilege of Taking Old American Names

Boston, January 30.—Old-time American names were barred from use by foreigners naturalized here by Federal Judge Morton in forbidding obliteration of racial elements in names. Adolph Papkovitz was refused permission to call himself Parker, the court compromising on Popkin. Hyman Sotocovitch requested that he be allowed to call himself Stone. The judge thought Sotocovitch sufficiently short.

RACE RELATIONS DAY, SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 11

Washington, January 30.—The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America have designated February 11 as "Race Relations Sunday," to mark the start of a campaign against lynching. It was announced today. The organization's committee on church and race relations, which is headed by John J. Egan, of Atlanta, will attempt through the campaign, it was said, to develop good will by better understanding between the white and negro races. Discussion of the problems in pulpits, Sunday schools and meetings of young people's societies has been requested.

TWO ARE KILLED AS POLICE CLASH WITH TRAMMEN

Corbin, Ky., January 30.—Two men were killed and two were wounded in an encounter between city special policemen and tramen on the streets of Corbin early today. Cause for the clash has not been determined.

J. C. Barker, engine dispatcher, 44, and George Yeden, 23, special officer, are dead. Jeff Barker, switchman, and a man named Day, also an officer, are the wounded.

Versions given police indicated that the two Barkers were going home from work and met the special policemen just as they reached their gates. The latter were seeking the scene of shots they had heard. When questioned according to the guards, the Barkers began shooting.

A boarding house in which 15 railroad men were sleeping was dynamited recently at Corbin, with no fatalities. Today's shooting has not been connected with labor or strike troubles.

RULE DONATIONS TO WILSON FUND ARE TAX EXEMPT

Washington, January 30.—Commissioner Blair, of the internal revenue bureau, has ruled that contributions to the Woodrow Wilson foundation made subsequent to December 23, 1922, are legally exempt from application of the income tax laws. The ruling represents a reversal from the bureau's previous stand because of the incorporation December 26 of the foundation.

DISMISS LIQUOR CHARGE UNLESS WITNESS FOUND

Aniston, Ala., January 30.—(Special).—"Judge, I want to know how cum dese officers can walk right through my house and go out into the back yard and find a soft drink bottle full of whiskey under my back door like dey did unless dey know it's der?" was the question of Ida Walker, a negro woman who was charged in the police court Monday with a violation of the prohibition laws.

Officers Neely and Pope testified in the police court before Recorder Bibb that they searched the negro woman's house and found under the steps a small bottle of whiskey, and the recorder stated in open court that he would dismiss the case unless witnesses could be produced to swear that the negro woman had been seen to hide it there herself.

AGENTS UNWORTHY PLAN TO DEFRAUD U. S. NEWSPAPERS

Washington, January 30.—American newspaper publishers who have been invited by Rafael Gonzales, of Orizaba, Mexico, to send 50 or 75 copies of their Sunday papers and promised $100 upon receipt of the first shipment will be bothered no more. The postoffice department has issued a fraud order against Gonzales, who never remitted.

Memphis, Tenn., January 30.—Federal barge line pilots of the St. Louis district, who went on strike recently to enforce demands for a wage increase, have returned to work, pending a conference with Theodore Brent, general manager, and other officials of the Mississippi-Warrior service of the federal line, according to an announcement today by Captain C. E. Patton, superintendent of transportation of the line.

rarely awarded and that the winners highly prize the honor. The subject of the competition was "The Design and Decoration of the Interior of a Small Theater." This competition put on by the Beaux-Arts society is the foremost contest of the kind held in the country, and honors awarded from the society are considered indicative of highest merit. Following is the letter from Mr. Warren to Mr. Skinner:

Dear Mr. Skinner: At the judgment yesterday (January 29) all your right renderings received awards—Brantley, McCle, Graydon and Thomas receiving first mention. The others, Gill, Manning, Bjerke and Weeks, second mention. Brantley's project was very high quality and had it not been for certain weakness of plan, he would undoubtedly have received highest award. Even as it is his rendering is to be published and he will be able to form a comparison with the other good projects.

Congratulating you on the success of your men, believe me, yours truly,
(Signed) WHITNEY WARREN,
Director.

In every case where it is possible to do so the exact replicas of automobiles offered, however, will be used in the parade.

It was further stated that if Saturday proves to be a rainy day, the parade will be postponed until the following Monday or Tuesday.

The parade is sure to create a stir of interest in view of the fact that numerous people of Atlanta are enlisted in the campaign, and it is anticipated that the first official public appearance of the cars on parade will greatly stimulate activities in the contest.

not be permitted to transact any material business as long as it remains on the calendar. While Senator Lenroot predicts that his bill, which was finally put forward as the general rural credits measure, will be passed this week, a number of observers disagree. The opposition expressed today by Senator Brookhart has served to delay it at least two weeks, it is asserted.

With only five weeks left of the present session and with the house having taken no action on either the Capper or Lenroot bill, it is considered a gamble that both measures should receive favorable consideration in both houses. The Capper bill has already passed the senate, but first hearings before the house committee will not start before Wednesday. No effort has been made to have the house start on the Lenroot bill.

Whether the house will dispose of the Lenroot bill, following passage of the Capper measure, before the adjournment of congress, unless great pressure were applied.

Banking interests unfavorable. In addition to the opposition from progressives, manifested in the Brookhart statement of today, the Lenroot bill is looked upon unfavorably by eastern banking interests, it is said.

In brief, the Capper bill provides that private interests may organize the live stock and agricultural loan corporations, with capital of not less than $250,000, with the privilege of making loans on farm paper and that redemptive corporations, with capital of not less than $1,000,000, also may be organized to take over paper from the primary corporations. The system would unload into the federal reserve banks, and would be under the supervision of the comptroller of the currency. Loans would be authorized for not more than nine months, if they were secured by warehouse receipts for non-perishable products or chattel mortgages, giving a first lien on live stock being fattened for market.

Three-year loans could be made by primary corporations upon paper of owners of maturing and breeding live stock and dairy herds.

The Lenroot-Anderson bill would provide a possible government investment of $120,000,000 to furnish the foundation for a system of rural credits.

Each of the twelve federal farm land banks would be empowered to create a farm credits department, with a capital of $5,000,000, all of which would be subscribed by the government through the secretary of the treasury.

With the approval of the federal farm loan board and the president, each bank might issue $5,000,000 of additional capital, which the government would also subscribe.

To Sell Debentures. Each of the federal land banks also would be authorized to sell debentures to run not more than five years and in an amount not exceeding ten times the amount of the capital and surplus of its farm credits department. This would mean a possible issue of debentures from all twelve banks totaling $1,200,000,000. The debentures would be secured by cash or properly secured paper on which loans had been made.

The farm credits department of each bank would be authorized to discount or to deal in agricultural papers issued for any agricultural purpose, or for raising, breeding, fattening or marketing live stock.

Its dealings in this respect could be with any other farm bank or with any national bank, state trust company, rural credit corporation, incorporated live stock loan or farm credit company, savings institution, co-operative bank or co-operative credit or marketing association.

Also, the farm credits department of each bank would be allowed to deal in the debentures of other banks, and to make loans direct to co-operative associations, either producing, distributing and marketing, if the loans were secured by warehouse receipts in the case of agricultural products or by chattel mortgages in the case of live stock.

May Take Farm Paper. The Lenroot-Anderson bill further provides that the federal reserve system may take various grades of agricultural paper for periods running up to nine months.

In the debate in the senate, on the bill, Senator Norbeck, one of the active spokesmen for the farmers, voiced objections said to be held by the more radical element. Some of the element want aid to the farmers along the line like those given in the last two years by the war finance corporation.

Senator Norbeck summed his objections to the Lenroot-Anderson bill as follows:

"1—Uncertainty of expert witnesses before the banking and currency committee as to the workability of the measure.

"2—Lack of capital provided to meet the needs of agriculture.

"3—Cumbersome method proposed to move funds from one federal land bank district to another.

"4—Uncertainty of administration by federal farm land banks as a side-line. It should have been placed in the hands of war finance corporation, which has organization as well as experience to administer such a law.

"5—Danger that offering of farm loan debentures from various land banks will affect adversely the market for farm land bank bonds."

Turkey Offered Hearing at Meet Of League Council

Moslems Can Argue Questions If Jurisdiction of Conference Accepted.

Paris, January 30.—(By the Associated Press.)—It is for Turkey to say whether the council of the league of nations shall take up the question of the frontiers between Anatolia and Iraq and the disposition of the rich petroleum deposits in the Mosul region.

The Earl of Balfour, in presenting this subject to the council today, did not go so far as to submit a proposition. The council decided, therefore, that there was nothing for the moment for it to act on, but it was made clear by Lord Balfour and M. Viviani that if Turkey would accept the jurisdiction of the league she would have a chance to defend her case on a footing of absolute equality with Great Britain.

Both Lord Balfour and M. Viviani expressed the hope that the Turks would accept either the terms of the treaty proposed at Lausanne or mediation of the council. The former said that the British government was of the opinion that the only way to provide for the contingency of refusal by the Turks was to invoke "Article XI" of the covenant and summon a special meeting of the council to deal with a situation which would menace the peace of the world.

Will Watch Lausanne. Though the council took no action, simply receiving Balfour's declaration as such, there is no doubt that the whole council thinks as he does, the procedure adopted being based on consultations in which all the members took part. The council will wait till after adjournment of the Lausanne conference, giving the Turks what is considered ample time to reflect and accept Lord Curzon's proposition for mediation by the league.

If the Turks simply refrain from replying, then action by the council will await developments of the frontier.

If no attacks are made upon the mandated territory—what was formerly Mesopotamia, but is now the Kingdom of Iraq—no action will be taken at all.

The council spent most of the afternoon considering several disputed points in the administration of the territories under its supervision. A good many private talks between the members are going on respecting Germany's protest against the presence of the French troops in the Saar valley, in the hope that they can reach a unanimous agreement without being obliged to indulge in contention in a full session.

The Lithuanian-Polish dispute will also come up again. Though the agenda is mostly made up of these questions, no minute details of the administration of the Saar region and Danzig, it is expected the council will remain in session until early next week.

WOMAN, POSING AS MAN, CAUGHT IN WHISKY RAID

Augusta, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—Doris Smith, a 22-year-old white girl, was arrested this afternoon in Burke county by Federal Prohibition Agent Foshes and is charged with a violation of the prohibition law. The young woman, according to the officers, was masquerading as a man when arrested at the still which was captured by the officers. It is said that she was with Clarence Gay and both of them were operating the still when it was "flushed" by the officers. The woman was taken for a man by the officers and it was some time before the discovery was made that the man taken was a woman. This is the first case of this kind in this section where a woman posing as a man has been arrested for violation of the prohibition law. The still captured was a 150-gallon affair and was in full blast when the officers found it.

HARDING INVITED TO GREET RETURN OF RHINE TROOPS

Savannah, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—President Harding has been invited to be in Savannah on February 7 to greet the first returning American soldiers from the Rhine-land. Up to tonight he had not replied. In addition to Governor Hardwick, who will be present, the governors of South Carolina, Florida and other states have also been invited. Major General David E. Shanks, as well as Major General Farnsworth, will be present. At a banquet to be given the men Governor Hardwick, General Shanks, Mayor Seabrook, of Savannah, and others will be speakers. Judge Peter W. Meldrum will be toastmaster of the occasion and Brigadier General Robert Travis will also be a speaker in welcoming the returning soldiers. Colonel Bates, in command of the troops, will respond for the doughboys.

A great program of entertainment and exercises for the day is being prepared.

Weaving appears to have been practiced in China more than 600 years before it was known in Europe or Asia.

FATTY ARBUCKLE GIVES UP ACTING; TO BE DIRECTOR

Los Angeles, Cal., January 30.—Roscoe C. ("Fatty") Arbuckle announced tonight he had signed a contract to direct motion pictures for a comedy film corporation and that he was "done with acting."

"My greatest ambition is to make people laugh and make them happy and I can do it best as a director of comedies," he said in a prepared statement. "This is my chance to make good in the right way and in the profession that I know and love in a way that will meet the approval of all. I start work at once and from now on you will hear from me only through the medium of the comedies that I direct."

The comedian recently announced he would appear in a film being made in a Hollywood studio. Religious and other organizations in various parts of the country protested against the reinstatement of the actor because of the nature of testimony produced in his trials for manslaughter in connection with the death of Miss Virginia Rappe in San Francisco last year, which ended in his acquittal.

New Brunswick, N. J., January 30. Lew Dockstader, nationally known minstrel man, was removed from the hotel where he was staying to a hospital here today following a fall on a pavement last night which resulted in the straining of his muscles and other injuries. Mr. Dockstader is 42 years old and weighs more than 200 pounds.

At the hospital late today physicians said his condition was not serious. His spine is not injured, they said.

Records Show Tutankhamen MAY BE PHARAOH OF THE OPPRESSION Had Most Eventful Career

LORD CARNARVON ARRIVES
Luxor, Egypt, January 30.—The marvels of the inner tomb of Tutankhamen, who ruled 3500 years ago, are about to be revealed.

Lord Carnarvon, who has devoted the last sixteen years to unearthing the wonders of the ancient Egypt, arrived Monday to direct the opening of Tutankhamen's tomb.

It is anticipated that Tutankhamen's body, and the splendors buried with it, will be found in a state of perfect preservation.

Howard Carter, an American, has been assisting Lord Carnarvon and is given much of the credit for the exploration of the Tutankhamen tomb.

BY ARTHUR WEIGALL.
(Copyright, 1923, by North American Newspaper Alliance and London Daily Mail.)

Luxor, Egypt, January 30.—I made a visit today to the workshop where practically all the relics found in Tutankhamen's tomb have now been stored. The place is so crowded with treasures awaiting treatment and packing that it is difficult to move about, and what an extraordinary and bewildering collection of treasures it is. Against the walls stand chairs, a stool, caskets, boxes, embalmed food, two beds with modern-like spring mattresses, chariot wheels, vases, pots and so forth, in astonishing array, some are in packing cases, others still resting on the wooden trays on which they were brought here from the tomb.

The throne, I suppose, still holds its own as the most magnificent object in the collection.

The bouquets and flowers now to be seen at the workshop have been so well treated with preservatives that there is no danger of their dropping to pieces, but the royal robes have proved a great difficulty.

One of these robes is most astonishing. It is covered with little discs of gold foil sewn on to the material so that the whole thing must have sparkled in the sunlight in a dazzling manner. Then the golden walking sticks and ceremonial staves with their exquisite decorations are here to be seen, now lying in cotton and wool, and nearby there is a leopard skin, with a head of pure gold.

The Queen's Glove.
But perhaps the most interesting and human object of all is the little glove which must have belonged to a child.

Tutankhamen had no children and therefore the glove probably belonged to his queen, who was only about twelve or thirteen when they married. No doubt it was her hands that prepared her husband's burial and we may suppose that the little glove was a treasured keepsake placed by her in the tomb.

The clans are gathering at Luxor. Every train deposits on the hot, dusty station platform dazed but eager special correspondents of the world's press. The huge Winter Palace hotel is crowded and private steamers, full of tourists, are collecting at the moorings. It is an animated scene and everywhere one hears talk of Tutankhamen, who is called now by the ribald "Tutank-Carter" or "Tut Carnarvon," or most usually simply "old Tut."

The work of preservation and packing of the contents of the tomb is conducted under cool and comfortable conditions, but Tutankhamen's tomb itself is now very hot and stuffy. The electric light engine, installed in the valley of the Kings for lighting the show tombs, supplies the current, but this works only in the morning so that the excavating party usually spend the morning in the tomb and the afternoon in the workshop.

The hope of seeing objects carried out of the tomb brings crowds of sightseers into the valley every morning, but in the afternoons the place is deserted, except for the excavators and the ever-present police. Now, however, only two statues, two chariots and the three chariot bodies are left, and work has been suspended at the moment. As the weather is exceptionally hot for this time of year I fancy that sightseers are mighty glad not to be impelled by their insatiable curiosity to make the one hour's journey on donkey-back up to the valley each day.

Facts About Tutankhamen.
I constantly hear said, both by amateur archaeologists and by those actually connected with the discovery that very little is known of this pharaoh's history, but this is quite a mistake. Considering the shortness of his reign our information about him is very considerable and I am sorry to say that it reveals a seemingly rather vacillating character, though doubtless he was the victim of circumstances.

During the thirteen years of Akhnaton's reign at Tell-el-Amarna (1371 to 1358 B. C.), while that strange, romantic figure was preaching there his monotheistic Anton worship, Tutankhamen appears to have held the position of court chamberlain, for to me there seems little doubt that he has to be identified with Tutu, or Duku, as the Asiatics called him. Akhnaton's trusted courier and friend. There is an inscription extant in which Tutu writes of himself: "My voice was not loud in the king's house, nor my walk swaggering in the palace. The king rose early every day to teach me, because of my zeal in performing his teaching. I have grown wealthy by the bounty of the king." And he tells us that he was the supreme mouthpiece of the entire land.

We find him, however, in close friendship with a certain Asiru, a seer, of great price, who, in a letter preserved among the famous Tell-el-Amarna correspondence, calls him differentially "My Lord" or "My Father," which suggests, by the way, that Tutankhamen was an elderly man.

No sooner had Akhnaton died than Tutankhamen got rid of the succeeding king, Smenkhkara, and seized the throne, marrying Akhnaton's daughter—then a little girl about thirteen—in order to legitimate the throne. He was soon induced by the priests of Amen to bring the court back to Thebes, and Tell-el-Amarna was finally abandoned, in such a hurry that modern excavators there have found the bodies of the king's dogs left to starve in the royal kennels, and oxen left to die on the royal farm.

He had the decency, it seems, to bring Akhnaton's mummy back with him and buried him in the valley of the kings, where Mr. Davis and I found him some years ago. But after that he played up to the Amen priesthood, Akhnaton's bitterest enemies, and celebrated his return to Thebes by building a famous colonnade in the temple of Luxor afterwards appropriated by the Pharaoh Horemheb. This colonnade is the most imposing part of the Luxor temple and was at that time the gods' dancing place, the king's dogs left to starve in the royal kennels, and oxen left to die on the royal farm.

He decorated its walls with scenes showing the wild enthusiasm of the populace at his return and the first celebration of the great Amen festival. The modern visitor may still see representations of the people dancing, beating drums, and blowing trumpets, and so forth in his honor—a fact oddly enough overlooked by most archaeologists.

Old Gods Re-established.
During Akhnaton's reign, and monotheistic religion, the temples of Amen and the old gods were neglected, but the new pharaoh, who had now aggrandized his name into first, Tutankhaton, and then, "Tutankhamen," re-established these and in the great inscription at Karnak tells us in vivid phrases how he did so. He said: "The temples of the gods had come upon bad times. Their courts were a road for common folk. The land was overgrown with weeds and the gods were neglected. It is now then that my majesty searched for what was useful for Amen, made his image in pure gold, raised monuments to other gods, filled their buildings with foreign slaves, and multiplied their estates."

The tomb of Huy, his viceroy in Ethiopia, is now open to visitors at Thebes and is decorated with scenes showing the prince of earth doing homage and bringing tribute, but, curiously enough, sightseers seem to have overlooked this.

Tutankhamen reigned at least six years, for the sixth year is mentioned on a piece of linen we found in the valley of the kings, but to the end of his life he seems to have hovered uncertainly between the Amen and Aton religions. Among objects found in the tomb are references to both, while at Sakkarah we find him doing honors to the burial of the sacred Apis Bull. He paid, however, for this vacillation, for a few years after his death his name was expunged from the official records and he would not have been much remembered had not time shown traces of his name, under that of Horemheb—surcharged over it almost wherever it occurred—and indeed his tomb itself now been discovered.

I wish I had space to give a more detailed story of the life of this vicar-of-Bray-like character, who has come down to us, in Egyptian history, as a pharaoh who denied the Monotheism instituted by Akhnaton and, in biblical history, as the pharaoh who denied Jehovah—if I am right in supposing him to be the pharaoh of the Oppression. In a few days now, perhaps the end of this week, excavations will pull down the sealed wall and disturb his long sleep and then, possibly, there will be more to tell about him and his inconsistent career.

PRIEST IS HELD AS POLICE PROBE SHOOTING OF GIRL

Erie, Pa., January 30.—Sophia Saymanowski, a servant in the parish house of St. Casimir's Polish Catholic church, was shot and killed as she approached the building in company with Mary Wojewock, the housekeeper, last midnight, and Rev. Father John Dambinski is being held in the police station awaiting the result of an investigation. The girl was shot three times through the heart.

Father Dambinski was taken into custody shortly after the shooting. The police say they found him in bed and that while he at first was unable to give a clear version of the shooting, he afterwards told them the girl had been killed by accident. According to the housekeeper she and her assistant, returning to the house shortly after midnight, found the front door wide open. They entered the darkened hallway and saw the form of a man moving toward them from the nearest room. She screamed "burglars" and ran to the porch. Immediately, she said, three shots were fired.

The police declared they had found a pistol in a desk near Father Dambinski's bed. Two empty shells were found in the front room on the first floor.

New plants, forages, grains and fruits numbering into hundreds and thousands, are brought to this country and tested out under local field conditions by government experts.

CAROLINA SOLON URGES INQUIRY COTTON INDUSTRY

Washington, January 30.—Broad investigation of the cotton industry by the federal trade commission is directed in a resolution by Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, reported today by the senate agricultural committee. The inquiry would cover foreign and domestic production and consumption, exchanges, mill operations and all features of the growing and marketing of cotton.

Senator Smith originally proposed that the senate committee conduct the inquiry, but the committee today decided to refer the work to the trade commission.

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

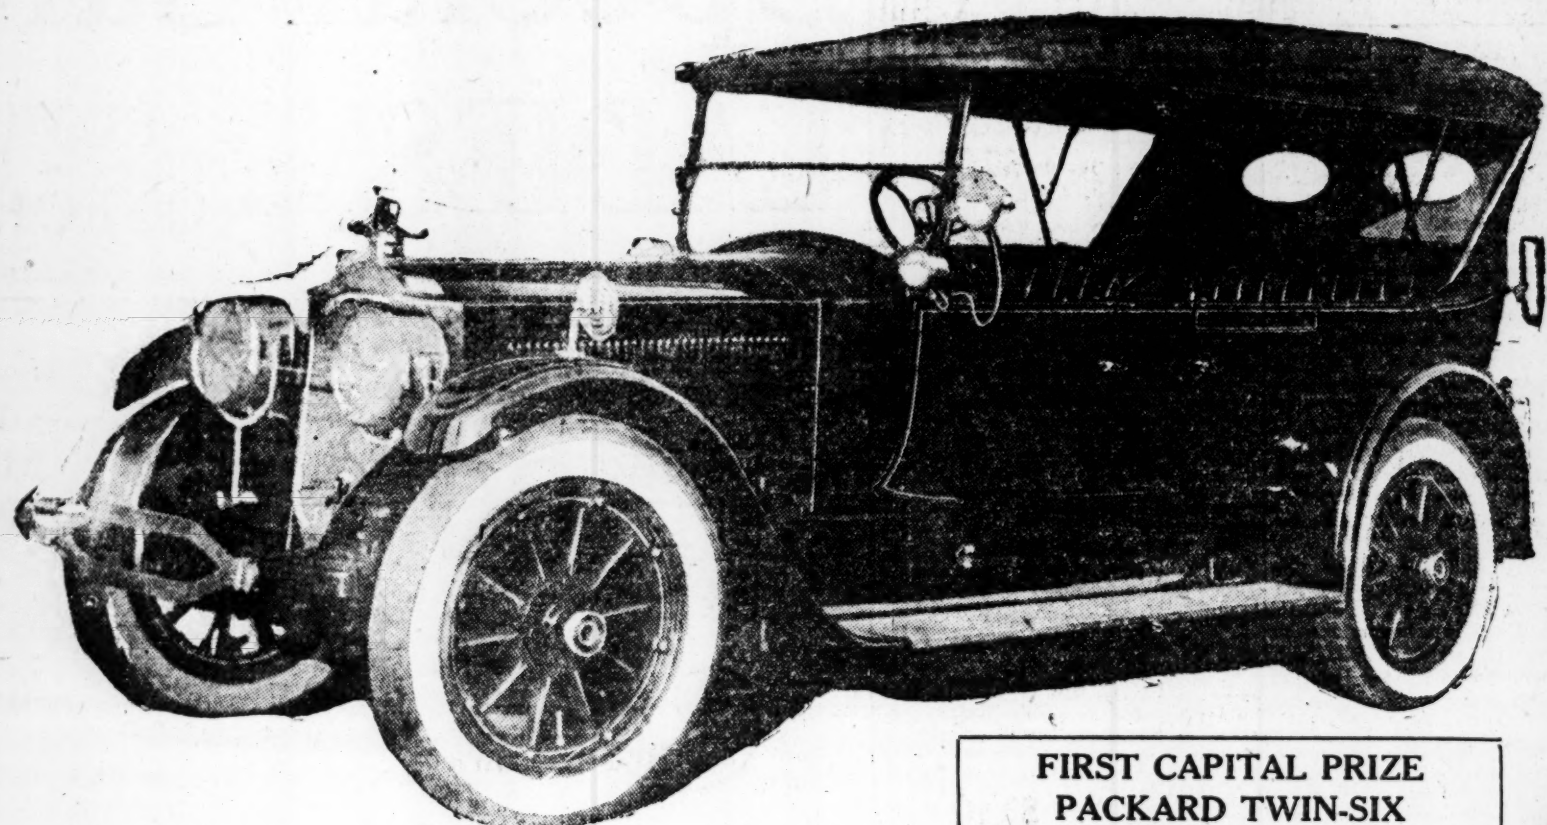

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. HEAR INNES PLEA ON FEBRUARY 10

Seek to Quash Federal Indictment Charging Use of Mails to Defraud Nelms Sisters.

Hearing of the motion to quash the joint federal indictment of Victor E. Innes and his wife, Ida Innes, has been set for February 10. It was announced from the federal court clerk's office Tuesday. The charge is using mails to defraud the Nelms sisters.

Robert E. Church, attorney for Innes, filed the motion in the district court clerk's office Tuesday afternoon. Ex-Governor Hugh M. Dorsey will handle the case for the government, representing the district attorney.

Innes is now in Fulton tower awaiting trial on this charge, having been arrested recently following completion of a sentence on the Fulton county charge for conviction on a charge of larceny after trust.

Were Freed of Murder. Innes was first indicted and tried for murder in Texas, accused of killing Miss Beatrice Nelms and her sister, Mrs. Eloise Nelms Dennis, daughters of the late Sheriff John W. Nelms, of Fulton county.

Both Innes and his wife were tried for murder, but were acquitted because the bodies of the two girls could not be produced. The case attracted national attention.

Following this acquittal, Innes and his wife were indicted here by ex-Governor Dorsey, then solicitor general, charging larceny after trust. Both were convicted on this charge and both sentenced, but his wife's sentence was later commuted on account of her ill health.

Mrs. Innes is now in Oregon, still suffering from ill health, according to reports.

Technical Objections. Efforts to quash the indictment are based on allegations that the indictment should have been returned in Nevada, the district where the alleged fraudulent letters were mailed, instead of in Georgia where they were alleged to have been received. The motion also claims that the letters referred to in the indictment are not exact copies, but merely substantial copies reproduced from memory by Mrs. Nelms, deceased mother of the missing girls. It further alleges that the indictments do not set out sufficient particulars of the alleged fraudulent use of the mails.

Should the motion to quash the indictments succeed, this will remove the last of the charges brought against Innes and his wife in connection with the two Nelms girls who disappeared in 1914 and were last seen in Texas. Marshall Nelms, brother of the missing girls, and Mrs. Nelms, mother, now deceased, spent years in futile search.

The indictment which it is moved to quash grew out of alleged operations of Innes in which he wrote letters to Mrs. Nelms and thereby secured money from her. He was, according to the letters figuring in the indictment, to invest the money for Mrs. Nelms, but in the indictment it is alleged that he diverted it to his personal benefit.

BAGGAGEMASTER ARRESTED TUESDAY IN THEFT CASE

L. H. Barber, baggagemaster on the Atlantic Coast Line between Jacksonville and Tampa, was arrested by special agents of the railroad in Jacksonville Tuesday, according to a telegram to Joe P. Johnston, inspector in charge, Atlanta division, and is being held pending investigations of stolen property alleged to have been recovered from the man's residence.

Inspector Johnston received a wire from Inspector Jervey, of Jacksonville, and no details were given. Mr. Johnston stated that the postoffice department was interested because of the fact that at certain times the baggagemaster had supervision over the handling of certain classes of mail.

GRAY M'LINTOCK TELLS KIWANIANS OF WILD HORSES

Spectacular death struggles between wild stallions of the northwestern plains and other thrilling incidents observed during his career of twenty-four years as a plainsman, tracker, trapper and student of natural history were vividly described Tuesday by Dr. Gray M'Lintock, author and lecturer, in an address at the weekly luncheon of the Kiwanis club.

An attempt by himself and associates in 1900 to corral the wild horses which roam the valley of the Sullivan lakes in Montana failed because, he said, the animals, having known nothing but freedom, died before submitting to any attempt to corral them. Dr. M'Lintock is the author of "Charity Cromar," "The Itinerants," and "Margaret of the North Country." He announced at the Kiwanis meeting that he has decided to make his home in Atlanta.

The program included songs by Miss Mabel Whitney, Mrs. Hazel Whitney Rolfe and Miss Aimee Hardy. Their accompanist was Mrs. Margaret Stillwell Harrower. Dave Webb presided.

HUTCHINS HEARING TO BE SATURDAY; GIRL IS BETTER

Hearing will be held at 10 o'clock Saturday on the habeas corpus proceedings filed in Fulton superior court Tuesday for J. W. Hutchins to obtain his freedom from police barracks, where he has been held since the shooting of Miss Alma Randall in the Austell building Monday.

Detectives assigned to investigate the shooting have reported finding no evidence which does not corroborate the story of Miss Randall and Hutchins that the shooting was accidental, according to Fred Harrison, Hutchins' attorney.

Miss Randall was slightly improved from her wound Tuesday, and was removed from Grady hospital to St. Joseph's infirmary. An attack of pneumonia was the only development in her condition feared by physicians.

CHINESE EMBROIDERY DISPLAY AT CHAMBER

An unusual collection of Chinese embroideries will be on exhibition today and Thursday in the club room of the business women's division of the chamber of commerce, according to Harry G. Mitchell, commercial agent for the United States department of commerce and member of the Atlanta foreign trade club, under whose auspices the exhibition is being staged. The collection has been secured from Tatum H. Thomas, who is now visiting friends in Atlanta after an extended trip through China.

MORE SPRINKLES FOR WEDNESDAY, SAYS WEATHER MAN

"I don't think it will rain much Wednesday, but we will have a few 'sprinkles' during the day, just about enough precipitation to make umbrellas assets instead of liabilities," C. P. von Herrmann, local weather forecaster, said Tuesday night.

Mr. von Herrmann was kind enough to tell also that the temperature wouldn't change any at all. In other words, Wednesday will be just another day like Tuesday was. Sprinkling "off and on" during the whole day in order to keep the streets a little splattery and slippery, and to afford good reason for a display of umbrellas and other anti-rain equipment.

With the streets slippery and simply packed with people carrying umbrellas, it is no commonplace accomplishment to walk from the Whitehall viaduct, across Five Points and up to the corner of Forsyth, Peachtree and Pryor streets, without the loss of an eye or so.

Some people are so careless with their method of bearing these portable roofs that it's sheer folly and risk of life to venture out upon the more crowded streets of this thriving city.

"My brother got so bad with stomach and liver trouble that when I saw him after a year I didn't know him. He was emaciated and yellow as a pumpkin and was often in great pain. The first dose of it gave him great relief and in a month he was good as ever." SOCIAL AGENCIES HEAR YEAR'S PLANS

Council Authorizes New Committees and Elects New Associations to Membership at Meeting.

Eighteen state agencies were represented at the January meeting of the Georgia Council of Social Agencies held in the auditorium of the chamber of commerce Tuesday afternoon. This was the first meeting since the council was organized last year. Secretary Burr Blackburn outlined the work the council will undertake this year.

Committees on "Children's Laws," to co-operate with the children's code commission, and on "Treatment and Prevention of Crime," to study the problems involved in the handling of criminals by the courts and penal institutions, will be organized, the council decided.

A committee on community councils is also to be formed to make a study of community councils in Georgia, and to assist them. A committee on social work conferences and training will plan district and state conferences of social workers, and co-operate with the summer school of the university in social work training.

It was decided to publish shortly a complete directory of the member agencies in the council, with a full explanation of the purposes of each, and the services they can render to the local community.

To entertain conference. The council will act as host to the Southern Child Welfare conference to be held in Atlanta March 13-14, and will entertain the visiting delegates at supper on March 13. A reception and arrangements committee to handle this conference is to be formed shortly.

The secretary was instructed to assist the state mental hygiene committee, the State Association of Child Welfare Institutions, and the State Association of Family Service Agencies.

Dr. T. F. Abernethy explained the work of the state department of health; Dr. Theodore Toop, of the state health council; J. F. Faulkner, of the State Tuberculosis Association.

In the field of education, Dr. M. M. Parks spoke for the department of education. Fort Land told of the vocational and rehabilitation work of the department of education, and Miss Charlotte Templeton of the work of the state library commission.

In the field of dependency, delinquency and neglect, Miss Rhoda Kaufman outlined the program of the state department of public welfare; Miss Elsie McElmore, of the Red Cross; Captain Young, of the Salvation Army; Robert B. McLeod, of the Georgia Children's Home society; and T. J. Woolf, Jr., of the state committee on race relations.

In the field of penology, Judge T. E. Patterson spoke for the Georgia prison commission, while the recreation and social work of the state Y. M. C. A. was explained by Thomas Johnson, that of the Y. W. C. A. by Miss Irma Finley, and of the Playground and Recreation Association of America by J. B. Williams. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson spoke for the state children's code commission.

TURNER COUNTY FARM PROGRAM IS STUDIED

Dougherty and McIntosh Delegates Consider "Georgia Association" Program.

Ashburn, Ga., January 30.—(Special.)—A delegation of fifteen men reached here tonight from McIntosh county to look at the Turner county farms tomorrow. A delegation of 29 to 75 is also expected here tomorrow from the neighborhood of Albany and preparations are being made to entertain both parties.

The Turner county permanent prosperity program, which is that of the Georgia association, is receiving wide notice, and the delegations from Dougherty and McIntosh are planning to start the association program in their respective counties.

George T. Betts, president of the association, states that it hopes to have the permanent prosperity program in at least fifty counties this year. He states that it is the one way to beat the boll weevil and make all Georgia prosperous.

The delegations tomorrow will be shown some of the dairy and poultry farms of the county and will return at noon to luncheon at the hotel. In the afternoon there will be some talks by representatives here of how to get farmers organized and behind a movement of the kind. Visits will be made to the creamery and to the mammoth 10,000 hatchery.

The creamery is steadily increasing in the volume of its business and the hatchery has already more space than necessary each time to fill it to its capacity. President Betts announced that a campaign is being on in a number of counties now to get the lines up on the program which has done so much to revolutionize conditions in Turner county.

TO BE LET ALONE Is Citizen's Right, Napier Declares

Attorney-General Speaks to Parent-Teachers on Constitution of Georgia.

The only record of the meeting at which the present constitution of the state of Georgia was drawn up and adopted in 1877, now extant, is that in the files of The Atlanta Constitution, written by Sam W. Small, acting in the capacity as a reporter for this paper at that convention.

This interesting fact was brought out by Attorney-General George M. Napier in his speech on the "Constitution of Georgia" delivered Tuesday afternoon before the meeting of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher association held under the auspices of the good citizenship committee in the senate chamber at the capitol.

Mr. Napier predicted also that some day there would be a fourth feature added to the objective trinity, "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." This, he said, would be the recognition of the right "to be let alone." He said that the time would come when citizens would demand the exact specification of this right, now contained in the document only by inference.

Mr. Napier, in tracing the origin and history of Georgia's constitution, showed how it had been a growth from the first constitution of the state of British history, beginning with Magna Charta, and including the immortal bill of rights and habeas corpus acts.

How the first constitution of Georgia had been adopted in 1777, but how there had been many changes made and new constitutions adopted until the final form was ratified in 1877. He also showed how this final form contains clauses which are taken, practically verbatim, from the original text of the Magna Charta.

Following Mr. Napier, Superintendent of City Schools Willis A. Sutton spoke on "Good Citizenship." He divided his discourse into four sections: the right of citizenship, the rights of citizenship, the privileges of citizenship and the obligations of citizenship.

It was announced that the next meeting in this series will be held in the senate chamber on the third Tuesday in February and that the program would be announced later.

MRS. H. P. PERRYMAN PASSES TO REWARD

Mrs. Perryman had been a resident of Atlanta since a few years after the civil war. She was a member of the Druid Hills Baptist church and had a host of friends in the city.

Besides her son, she is survived by another son, Virgil E. Perryman, and two brothers, Stephen Brown, of San Francisco, Cal., and John Brown, of Barnesville. Four grandchildren also survive. They are Mrs. W. R. DeLoach and Ben H. Arthur and Master Billie Perryman.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at the chapel of Awtry & Lowndes, Rev. F. C. McConnell, pastor of Druid Hills Baptist church, officiating. Interment will be in West View.

LOVE OF FINERY RESULTS IN GIRL'S ARREST TUESDAY

Women's finery purchased, and charged to the account of another woman, led to the arrest Tuesday of Miss Dorothy Wesley, age 26, 260 Peachtree avenue.

She is accused of purchasing more than $300 worth of clothing from downtown shops under false pretenses. Her arrest followed an investigation that has, it is said, been in progress for weeks.

The "bunco scheme" was revealed when the person to whom the goods were charged protested the bill. The arrest was made by representatives of the Stores Mutual Protective association. She furnished a $300 bond and was released.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week Too Many Crooks

BY E. J. RATH

Next Week, "The Mantle of Silence"
By E. J. Rath

Charlotte and the constable stared at each other in astonishment, and then the constable, with a look of a man who has just seen a ghost, rushed for the door to the second floor. In spite of his clumsiness he made such good speed that Charlotte had difficulty in keeping pace with him.

"What you say?" he demanded, seizing Charlotte by the arm. "He—she said out of a window, gasped Charlotte. "Two of 'em seen him go! He got a pretty good start, but I saw him after him now."

"Which way?" Charlotte pointed in the direction of Smythe place.

"Damn!" said the constable. "Come on!" He lumbered off, followed by Charlotte. Standing on the lawn, Charlotte stared up at the open window of Bidwell Wright's room. A man was seen with her eyes the 20-foot drop to the ground. There was a faint sound of barking in the distance. Then silence.

She walked quickly to the house and went upstairs. At the farther end of a hall that shot off at a right angle from the main corridor she paused at a door and knocked. There was no answer from within. She listened, then knocked again. Cautiously she turned the knob, pushed the door ajar and peered in. The room was dark and quiet.

"Mr. Wright!" she called softly. There was no answer. Her finger reached the light switch, hesitated for an instant, and then pressed it. Charlotte stepped into the room. The bed had been occupied. There was some clothing tossed on a chair. But Bidwell Wright was gone.

CHAPTER VI

The Show-Down. Charlotte walked slowly downstairs, conscious of the thrill of having come upon a mystery. Bidwell Wright had flown—by way of the window. But why?

Her reverie was interrupted by the whir of a motor outside and cautious footsteps on the porch. Somebody inserted a key in the front door. Charlotte stepped quickly into the hall, just in time to confront Fanny and Erastus P. Browning.

"Hello, old dear; you're up late," said Fanny with a rare smile. "Well, me for your beauty sleep. Night-night, folks."

As she ran off upstairs a tiny tinkle of laughter floated back.

Mr. Browning surveyed his daughter with unmistakable embarrassment. "Hm. Still working? Shouldn't try your eyes too much, my dear."

"I want to talk to you," said Charlotte coldly, gesturing toward the library. "Come in here."

He sighed and walked reluctantly into the library.

"Dad, what does this mean?" demanded his daughter, as she faced him.

"Mean? Mean? Why—er—nothing. Nothing at all, my dear. Just went for a little drive this afternoon. Had a bite to eat. Drove to town and saw a show. Drove back again."

Charlotte was glaring at her parent. "This stops right here!" she said slowly. "Do you hear me? No more of it. Are you deliberately trying to disgrace the family? I will not have you associate with such a person."

"But what's the difference? If we entertain her as a guest?"

"A great difference," interrupted Charlotte sternly. "These people are not ordinary guests; a guest is a friend. They are not here to be paraded in public or among our friends. You have no right or justification to disgrace yourself in such a manner."

"I'm quite sure I didn't disgrace myself," he said mildly. "I behaved perfectly. And so did Fan—Miss Harbaway."

"But you were seen with her—in public!"

"Yes, I was seen with her," he admitted. "But Charlotte, my dear, weren't you seen with Mr. Wright at the Smythe garden party? Now if you can take one—ah—crook to a garden party, why can't I take another to a show?"

"The cases are entirely different," declared Charlotte. "Very different, dad. Mr. Wright is a—"

"He's a crook, isn't he?" demanded Mr. Browning relentlessly.

"We will not pursue this argument any further," Charlotte broke in hastily. "You understand my views. It must never happen again, dad."

"But why, if?"

"You are altogether too old and—I won't have it; that's all. Go to bed!"

She kissed him perfunctorily, and Erastus P. Browning escaped.

Charlotte was more angry at the close of the interview than at the beginning. This time she was angry at herself. This time she had forgotten about the garden party, and she did not think it was considerate of Erastus P. Browning to remember it. Besides, Bidwell Wright was quite a different person from Boston Fanny.

"There's a difference. I know there's a difference," she told herself. While she was analyzing the differences—somewhat laboriously, perhaps—the sound of a latch-key in the front door again interrupted her. A man stepped lightly into the hallway. It was Bidwell Wright.

"Good morning," he said, as he entered.

Charlotte was too surprised to answer, and favored him only with a blank stare. He did not look like a hunted man; he bore no signs of encounter. He was smiling.

"They—didn't get you?" she managed.

"Oh, no," he answered lightly. "Of course I had an advantage. I was fresh, you see. The dogs overtook me, I admit. I don't pretend to outrun a dog. But they were a friendly pair; we got along famously."

"But the constable—the posse?"

"Off hand I'd say they are a couple miles down the road, and still moving."

"I don't understand," said Charlotte helplessly. "Aren't you afraid they'll come back?"

It was Wright's turn to appear surprised.

"Suppose they do. Why should I be afraid?"

"But—aren't you—wanted?"

He was puzzled for an instant, then laughed.

"Not that I know of, Miss Browning."

"But you went out in such a curious way that I thought, of course—"

"Ah, I see," he added, nodding. "Quite a natural supposition. I was asleep when the rumpus started. I got up and dressed; had an idea I might be needed, you know. I saw Frisco come around the corner of the house, and of course, I knew what was up."

By the time I was dressed you had your friend, the constable, on your hands. I heard a bit of the conversation and understood. While you were talking about the attic, I was out in the hall on the second floor. Wouldn't it have been a fine mess—walking in on old Bill Remington?"

He paused to laugh at the fancy.

"So, you see, something had to be done, Miss Browning," he added. Charlotte made no attempt to conceal the admiration in her eyes.

"By the way," he asked, "just where did you hide our friend Frisco?"

"He's safe," she gasped. "He's locked in my cedar chest."

Wright sprang from his chair. "I think we'd better look him up," he said. "He must find it rather stuffy."

"My poor gowns," cried Charlotte, as she rushed from the room.

They found Frisco none the worse for his experience, though the same thing could not be said of the gowns. Bidwell Wright and Marshall Blackstone stared incredulously.

"You? With a premonition? That's rich. When did you begin to fall for the premonition stuff? I can't reconcile a premonition with your otherwise fairly sane mind."

"Part of my premonition is that we are about to make use of the protection for which you so fortunately arranged," said Wright quietly, ignoring his friend's lightness.

Blackstone looked puzzled.

"Lord, man! The arrangements with the authorities, covering?"

Wright made a sweeping gesture with both arms. "Covering the whole business!"

"Oh—yes—yes," observed Blackstone slowly. "Yes, of course."

"I'll explain," said Wright, patiently. "The first part of my premonition is due to the fact that certain private detectives employed by Mrs. Smythe, as the result of her garden party, are still in the immediate neighborhood."

"Oh, well; but those gentlemen, who work by the day?"

"Wait. Certain other private detectives, representing worthy gentlemen of this community who have been notified by our excellent friend, Boston Fanny, that pay day is at hand, are also in the neighborhood."

"The town police," continued Bidwell Wright, "assisted by an astute dick (detective) from New York headquarters, have somehow obtained the notion that a certain Frisco Jimmy is sojourning in our little community and not wholly for the benefit of his health."

The lawyer pursed his lips and waited in silence.

"This morning I chanced to drop into the postoffice, added the master crook, "and there, in conference with our postmaster, were a couple of inspectors whom I recognized without difficulty. Somehow, in my premonition, these postoffice inspectors are connected with the hopes and fears of the astute Frisco."

Blackstone looked up at the ceiling and whistled.

"To continue, Marshall, this unspeakable little pickpocket with whom we have been living and eating three meals a day has seen two other gentlemen in the neighborhood whose presence causes him anguish of mind and loss of sleep. Which indicates to me that Benny has a slight premonition on his own account."

"Anything else?"

"I have a faint premonition—it results from a chance observation or two—that the secret service, which always keeps a fatherly eye upon those who compete with the government in the art of manufacturing wampum, is just a bit curious to know why our venerable fellow guest, Ten-Dollar Bill, spends so much of his little holiday indoors."

"Yes!" Blackstone tried to say it lightly.

"And we still have the constable left," continued Wright. "He also enters into my premonition. The town constable, it appears, needs an additional hand in the breaking of stone for one of the local highways, and has it in mind to engage our wanderer Percy for the part."

The master crook paused, lighted a cigarette with ostentatious care and then looked at Blackstone.

"So, you see, we are arriving at the point where, perforce, we yield the center of the stage to you, my friend," he observed placidly. "This is the cue for our excellent attorney and counselor-at-law to throw his protecting arms about our little flock and become, for the moment, our hero."

Blackstone strolled across the library and back again, chewing his under-lip meanwhile. As he came to a halt in front of Wright he laughed nervously.

"Protection, eh?"

Wright nodded encouragingly.

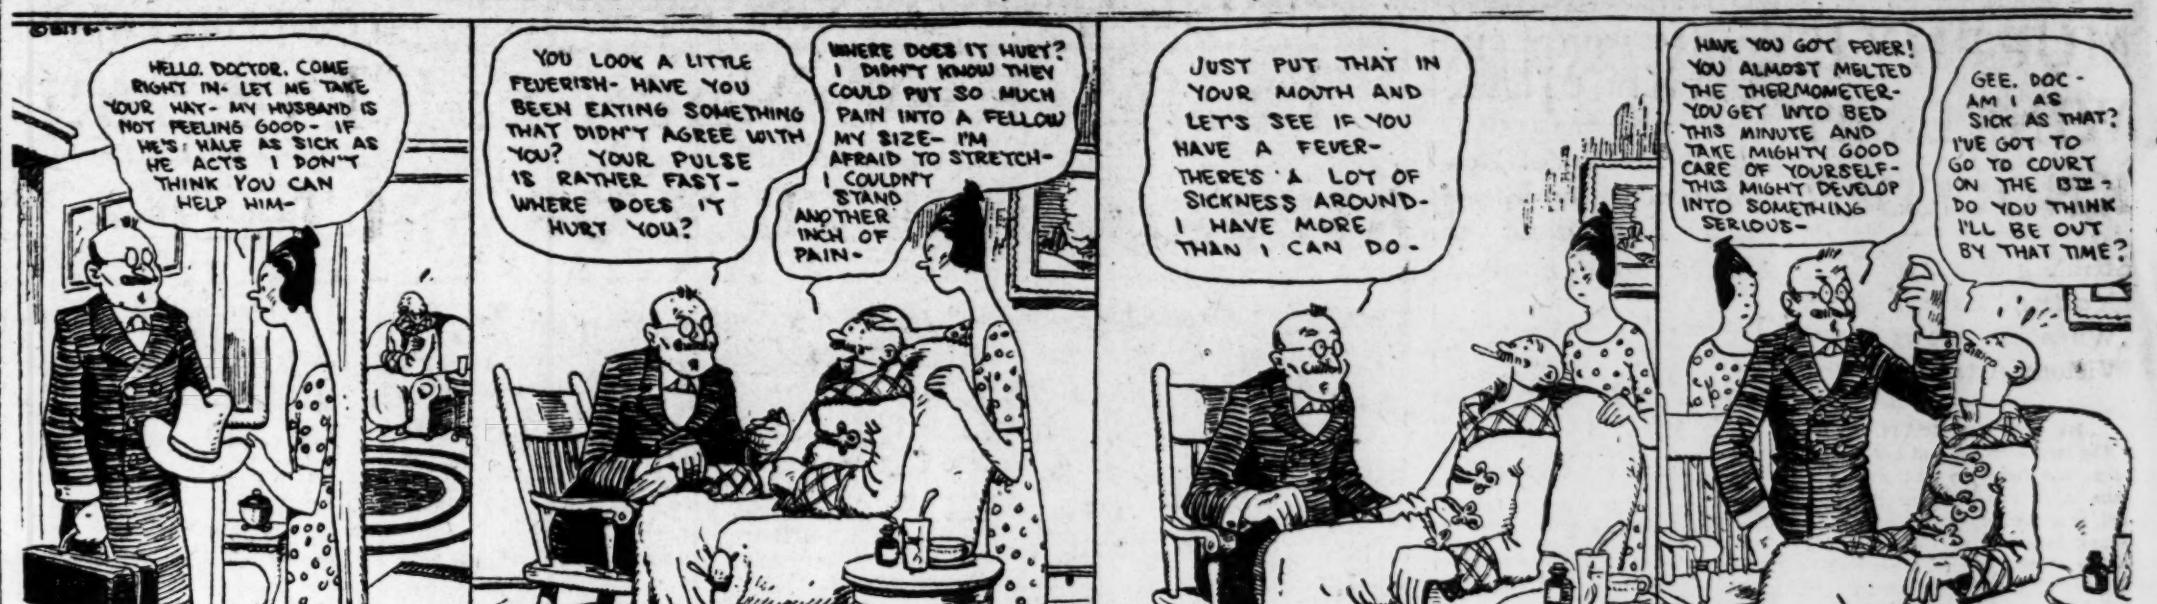

"Old man," said Blackstone solemnly, "there isn't any protection."

The master crook studied his friend for several seconds.

"May I ask," he said quietly, "what has become of it?"

"There never was any."

THE GUMPS—TELL ME, DOCTOR; TELL ME TRULY

was a strained pause as two irritated young men stood and regarded each other with unpleasant stares. Then Wright's attitude changed suddenly.

"Let's call the argument off," he suggested. "We're unanimous on some things, anyhow. And this is no time for you and me to pull in different directions. If we ever need to get our heads together this is the time."

"But it there, old man," said Blackstone, extending his hand. "You're dead right. And I'll admit I ought to have arranged for protection."

"Is it too late now?"

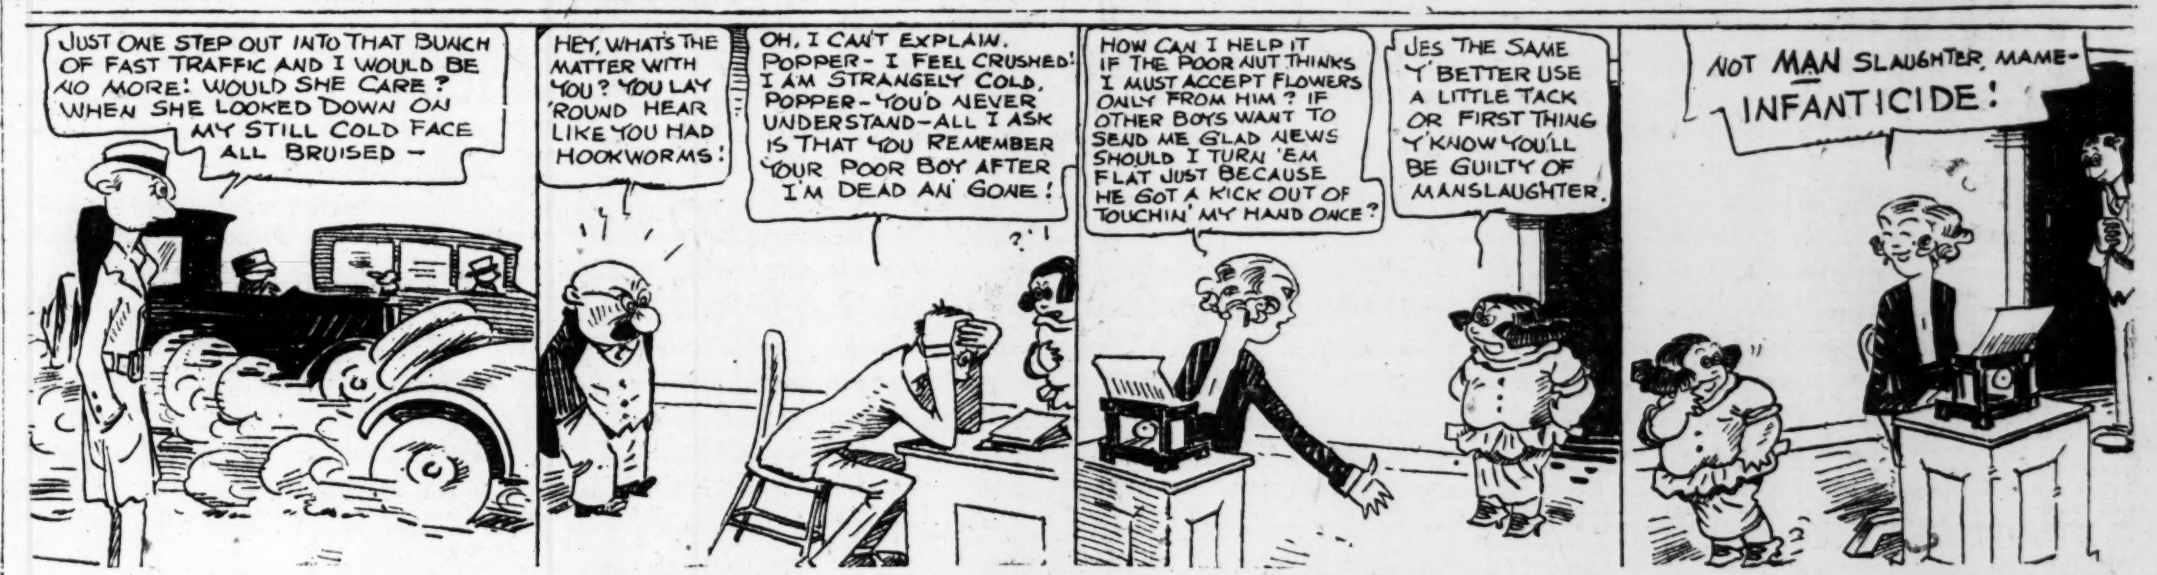

"It was too late before we started," answered Blackstone ruefully. "To be frank with you, I don't know a soul at headquarters."

"Then we'll have to manage without it, Marshall."

"You seem to forget, Marshall, that we promised these people all kinds of protection and told them to go to it. You were there when it happened. Why didn't you tip us off then?"

Blackstone made a gesture of indifference and Wright frowned. There

HUGE CROWD SEES STRIBLING WIN OVER HARRY KROHN

MURPHY IS WINNER BY KNOCKOUT

McGraw Tells How National League Was Cut Down

1923 BASEBALL SCHEDULE OF SOUTHERN LEAGUE

Stribling Wins in Every Round Except Fifth, When He Slows Up in Vicious Attack.

BY CLIFF WHEATLEY

The largest crowd that has witnessed a box fight in Atlanta since Jake Abel was fighting champions and near-champs turned out to see Young Stribling, the Mason middleweight, make a punching bag of Harry Krohn, of Akron, through ten rounds last night at the Auditorium. Officials of headquarters troop 108 cavalry, promoters of the affair, told The Constitution that receipts were a bit over $4,000 mark.

It was not a great fight, but Stribling proved himself to be a great fighter. That was the sentiment expressed afterwards by scores of spectators who had been dragged away from the ring by the police to see the boys in action. They came to see Stribling, and the youngster gave them their money's worth.

He knocked his heralded left, which incidentally was never in better working trim. He showed them that he could take wallop toward the latter part of the fight when he deliberately let down his guard and caught whatever Harry Krohn was minded to send. And above all things he proved to a very critical flock of spectators that he has rid himself of the shell that was once a part of his fighting system.

Stribling overlooked some chances to stop Krohn. There may have been malice aforethought in this, as the boy was out to make a good impression as he probably could before fans that had once cast him off, but were now ready to take him back into their affections. If the spectators wanted to see Young Stribling's complete mastery of things that pertain to fistiana, certainly they were not disappointed.

Krohn had little except ruggedness. There was little to fear from his punches. That, or Stribling is a tough youngster on his own account. In the fifth round Stribling slowed down considerably, apparently figuring that the halfway mark was the proper place to feel all the weapons his opponent had brought along. It was then that Krohn, the only round credited to him by his correspondent.

He had no defense against the rapidity of Stribling's left. It seemed that the Maconite could poke his glove through any time he cared to do so, and he must have wanted to many times, for Krohn was pretty well cut up as the fight progressed. He was ready to pull in his share of the highest pile of shekels assembled at the box office of the auditorium in many months.

Krohn was slow, deliberate in his movements as compared to the bevil-driving speed of his younger foe. He plodded along, ready to do some fighting at the slightest provocation, but in reality willing to start few of the assaults. He kept after Stribling, but he seldom felt strong enough to lead, and there is a difference. But this boy is tough, don't overlook that fact when trying to scratch up some reason for Stribling's failure to put him away.

Stribling showed remarkable improvement over his last start. Where he once had a good left hand, he possesses one now that will compare favorably with that of any middleweight in the world. And he has picked up some tricks of the trade that proved new to Krohn, who has been in the business long enough to be fairly familiar with many himself.

Stribling's speed enables him to shift to position for a lunge before his opponent can muster any sort of defense. This snuck, the old-timers say, that brought down so many victims. One or two more of this kind must be learned by Stribling and then the kid will be ready for the best opposition that can be provided.

In the first round Krohn had a hard time concealing his surprise over the reception he had been greeted by a manager usually very good at arranging Harry's list of friendly enemies. Frankly, Krohn was shocked at the start when he saw a 160-pound youngster driving in with lefts that hurt and getting away before Krohn could retaliate.

In the second round Krohn apparently fixed it in his mind that he was about to take one of the few beatings that have been chalked up to him. He was fighting in the preliminary. According to police, Joiner suffered from an attack of heart palpitation which probably caused him to faint.

SMITHIES TO PLAY MARIST

The prep basketball teams of the city are putting some extra time this week in an effort to get ready for the games Friday and Saturday of the coming week. Friday the big game on the schedule will be between Tech High and Marist and G. M. A. and Decatur High. Saturday afternoon the first round of the second half of the schedule will get under way with G. M. A. and Boy's High furnishing the real afternoon entertainment.

After three weeks of hard playing the second round of basketball will get under way with Tech High and Marist in the lead. Several teams were not picked until the latter part of the second week's playing and the result has been no less than five games being won by a two point margin. The close games have caused several of the young coaches in the league to sport many new gray hairs since.

The basketball season in the prep league should give the Atlanta teams plenty of practice in preparation for the two tournaments. The question of out-of-town basketball games for Atlanta for this season has been closed, for no team will have an opportunity of arranging such games.

With 14 games for each team in the city and many more in the tournaments the coaches of Tech High, Boy's High, and University will be well satisfied when the season ends for their teams will have gone through something over 25 games of basketball for a season.

HARRY GREB WINS BATTLE

Madison Square Garden, N. Y., January 30.—After a slow and somewhat painful beginning, Harry Greb, the American light heavyweight champion, geared himself into his swift bounding stride in the fourth round of his fight with young Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, Tuesday night, and from that point on to the end of the 15-round battle, Greb chased his client around the yard and beat him with everything from the handle of the rake to a stove yanked loose from the garden gate.

Harry made a characteristic Greb fight of it when he finally got under way.

In round one, two and three it did seem that Loughran, in his two previous fights with Greb, had solved the flying Dutchman style of the bounding burger from Mister Pitt's home town. He had a straight left that was more kick than jab and it set Greb back on his heels half a dozen times. Loughran also had a way, that was disgusting to Greb, of muffling Harry's casual slams which start from nowhere at all and land wherever something gets into their path.

But when Greb really got down to work he took out after Tommy like a spotted dog after a tally-ho.

JOINER RECOVERING.

Rufus Joiner, young Macon boy who appeared in one of the preliminaries at the boxing match at the City Auditorium Tuesday night, fainted in his chair at the beginning of the eighth round of college into the big league at the hospital, where physicians stated his condition was not serious.

Joiner and Mike Murphy, of Atlanta, were fighting in the preliminary. According to police, Joiner suffered from an attack of heart palpitation which probably caused him to faint.

STEPHENSON TO OUTFIELD

Is Tris Speaker's Plan

Alabama Collegian Too Good a Batter Not to Find Place in Indians' Regular Lineup.

Cleveland, Ohio, January 30.—(Special.)—Although Manager Tris Speaker has received more than one request to include Riggs Stephenson, the big Alabama boy, in a trade, Spoke has decided to hang on to the hard hitting collegian, who came to the rescue so nobly when he jumped out of college into the big league at the start of the 1921 campaign and subbed for Wambans so effectively.

Speaker cannot forget the great batting ability of the Alabama boy, and although he realizes that Old Hoss cannot take a regular infield berth away from any of the men he now counts on as fixtures, he considers Stephenson too valuable to part with, as Stevie can play second, short or third and probably first also.

It is the intention of Speaker, however, to drill Stephenson as an outfielder. Spoke has hoped to land a right hand batting gardener from another American league club, one who could alternate in the right garden with Homer Summa, but that deal has been held up with the possibility it never will go through. That situation has forced him to scan his available players with a view to developing someone now on the Indian roster to form a partnership with Summa, and Stephenson is the one he has picked.

WOODEN STANDS AT FLATS TO STICK

BY AL STATION

The Tech Athletic association has decided to let the temporary wooden stands, which were built at the north-west end of Grant field to take care of the crowds for the Auburn-Tech game, to stand. In order to do this, it was necessary for them to buy from Auburn her share of the stands, and have the stands such great hall in the stadium as to last for several years, the association decided it was good business policy to allow them to stand.

These stands are built on concrete and brick pillars and should last for a number of years.

These stands make the best baseball seats to be had in the country. The first row of seats is only 18 feet from homeplate, being separated from the plate by the width of the running track. Wire netting will be placed in front of the stands to protect the spectators from foul balls and wild pitches.

The stands are being fitted up with a press box, directly behind the plate. This box will be modern in every respect, with a telephone, telegraph equipment, etc., so that the score of the games may be reported by instant.

The place where the stands now rest was formerly a sharp bluff, which was used to advantage by the students for seeing the game directly behind the catcher, until the Athletic association placed an officer on the hill, and from that time on only the officer enjoyed the game from thisantage point. An oak tree extended its shade over these stands, making them the last word in luxurious enjoyment of a baseball game.

Barger Gets Job.

Lexington, Ky., January 30.—Cy Barger, of Columbia, Ky., graduate of Transylvania college here, former pitcher with the Brooklyn Nationals and the Boston Red Sox and one time manager of the Memphis Southern association team was appointed baseball coach for 1923 at the University of Kentucky at a meeting of the athletic council last night. Kentucky's schedule includes games with Notre Dame, Michigan, Georgia Tech and Center college.

Sewell to Coach.

Cleveland, Ohio, January 30.—Joe Sewell, Cleveland American league shortstop, has been appointed baseball coach at University of Alabama, according to advices received here today. He is the third member of the Indians to coach college teams prior to reporting for spring training.

BY ALBERT STATION.

Alabama, Clemson and Birmingham Southern are the new teams entered in the Tech relays for April 28. These teams will be utilized in right field and Speaker believes that by the time the season has opened he will know if Stephenson is a capable outfielder. If the Alabama man fails to make the grade as a gardener, Speaker will be forced to develop some other man for the job and use Stevie merely as an extra infielder, but he has a strong hunch that Stephenson will deliver.

Two-mile relay, each man to run 220 yards.

One-half mile relay, each man to run 80 yards.

Four-mile relay, each man to run 440 yards.

Spring medley relay, first two men to run 220 yards, third man to run 440 yards, fourth man to run 880 yards.

One-half mile relay, each man to run 220 yards.

One mile relay, each man to run 440 yards.

Two-mile relay, each man to run 880 yards.

In addition to these relays, the following single events will be held: 100-yard dash, 120 yards high hurdles, pole vault, javelin throw, high jump.

The freshman championship of the south will be decided in a one mile relay, each man running 440 yards.

A similar schedule of events has been arranged for the preparatory and high schools, more than 40 of whom have already entered teams.

The following colleges have entered: Kentucky, Auburn, Furman, Georgia Tech, Trinity, Florida, Spring Hill, Oglethorpe, Tennessee, Presbyterian, Mississippi A. & M., Southern college, Centre, King college, Baylor, Maryville, Southern Methodist university, Davidson, Carson-Newman, Alabama, Clemson and Birmingham Southern.

PRIDE GAMES FOR TONIGHT

Two fast games of basketball will be played tonight in the Prade league on the Auditorium-Armory court. The Western Electric team will play the Leaders club and the National Carbon company five will meet the DeMolay team. The first game will be played at 7 o'clock followed by the other at 8 o'clock. Due to a postponement of two games early in the season, only two games will be played instead of three as is usually the case.

The Western Electric-Leaders club game will be one fast game of basketball and should be keenly fought from the very beginning. The Western Electric team will not play Mumford and Bill Fincher. This announcement was made by Manager Jesse Fincher, of the Electric five, several days ago.

Why Corns?

just say Blue-jay to your druggist

The simplest way to end a corn is with Blue-jay. A corn stops the pain instantly. Then the corn loosens and comes out. Made in a colorless clear liquid (no drop does it) and in thin plasters. The action is the same.

Little Napoleon Explains

Alleged Jumping of Contract While Playing With St. Louis.

BY JOHN J. MCGRAW.

Rumblings of a coming upheaval in baseball—an upheaval that was to really change the baseball map—began to be heard in 1890, the year I managed the Orioles. Though we did not realize it for some time, that was to be the end of the old Orioles, the team that now lives in history.

It is not my intention to deal much with the government of the game, historically, in these memoirs; but to make clear the exciting incidents of that year and the next it is necessary that I give a little background. My purpose in the rest of the story is to be personal and incidental.

As I have said, several offers had been made for me during our lively season of 1890. At first Ned Hanlon and Harry von der Horst refused to consider any such offers. Soon their attitude changed. There were rumors of the National league being cut down to eight clubs. This meant, of course, that Baltimore would be one of the clubs to be dropped. Business had fallen off, due to the Spanish-American war, and it was quite a struggle to make both ends meet. Though it was repeatedly denied, the players had good reason to believe that the big cut was coming.

The league heads hesitated to act openly for fear the new American league, then expanding, would grab the territory. We played the season out, but the owners knew that Baltimore was doomed. Obviously the only way to escape a heavy loss was to sell the players before the balloon burst.

McGRAW AND ROBINSON SOLD.

I was not surprised, therefore, when notified during the winter that Robinson and myself had been sold to the St. Louis club. I never knew the purchase price exactly, but it was a pretty good sum. In the meantime the National league had been cut to eight clubs, leaving Louisville, Washington, Baltimore and Cleveland out in the cold.

At first Robbie and I refused to go. In fact, we declined to sign a contract for a long time. We did not report until May 5. Neither of us had any enthusiasm about playing with St. Louis. Our heart was not with that team. On top of that I was laid up frequently from attacks of malaria.

Right here I want to correct an impression that gained ground then, and has stuck, that I jumped the St. Louis club to go into the American league. I jumped no contract, then or at any other time. To clear this matter up I will tell what really happened at St. Louis and later I will show why I left the Baltimore American league club and came to New York.

The clause I objected to in my contract with the St. Louis club was the reserve clause. Both Robbie and myself refused to sign a contract which would hold us over another year, regardless of our wishes. On top of that I demanded a salary of $8,500, which Mr. Robinson, of St. Louis, finally agreed to. That, perhaps, was the largest salary paid for a player up to that time.

The reserve clause was stricken from our contracts. This made us free agents at the end of the season, giving us the right to go to another club or anywhere we pleased. The reserve clause at that time was a bone of contention among managers and players. We were determined not to be tied by it. That contract is still a matter of record and it would have been easy for anybody to have informed himself as to its clauses. Nobody did, however. They simply accused us of jumping. It probably made a better story that way.

NEVER MANAGED ST. LOUIS TEAM.

I played third base for the St. Louis club, but at no time did I act as manager, as has been written in several histories of the game. At one time Mr. Robinson, the owner, did offer me the management, but I refused to even consider it as long as Pat Tebeau had the job. Tebeau was a great friend of mine, even though we had fought each other like tomcats on the diamond for years. I think I had more scraps with Tebeau than any other man. As a result, we were close friends. After joining his club I declined absolutely to take his job. Even after Tebeau had resigned as manager I refused Mr. Robinson's offer.

During that season I played in ninety-five games for St. Louis. I did the best I could, but neither Robbie nor myself was able to give the same young fire and spirit to that team that we had to the old Orioles. The sentiment was missing.

Just outside the St. Louis park there was a race track. Always I have been interested in playing the ponies. It is the one sport I like outside of baseball. Most ball players are fond of the races.

With that temptation so close at hand it was a great trick for the players to get out of games by the umpires so that they could slip across the street and take a whirl at the ponies. You can well imagine what a tough spot that was for an umpire. On the slightest provocation we would jump on him and argue and wrangle until somebody got put out. That person was considered lucky. For a player to throw his glove in the air or slam his cap on the ground after a decision is considered the worst breach of discipline. Umpires consider it a direct evidence of disregard for authority. It usually means the player takes a trip to the clubhouse.

One afternoon I was particularly anxious to make a bet on a horse and I began early to antagonize Tim Hurst, the umpire. It was hard, too, because very few of the decisions were close. Finally, some runner slid into third, and I touched at him with the ball, though he was easily safe.

"You're blind as a bat!" I shouted at Umpire Hurst when he called the runner safe. Tim merely laughed in that sarcastic way of his. He paid no attention to me.

With that I threw my glove in the air, hurling my cap toward him. Still he did not move to throw me out. Then I ran up and caught him by the coat sleeve and gave it a yank, trying to work myself up into a rage.

"Say, lemme tell you something," Tim finally said to me, loud enough for everybody to hear: "You git back there and play third base. You're not going to get put out of this game—not on my life. And, lemme give you a tip—if you expect to get a bet down on Tip-Top, that two-year-old, you'd better send a boy over between innings. There ain't a chance!"

I was up against it. Tim Hurst was on. I sent my bet over between innings and played him the rest of the afternoon.

A few days later Tim did the same thing to Bill Dahlen. Instead of punishing the boys by throwing them out of the game, he enforced discipline by keeping them in. There were a few umpires that we could handle roughly but not Tim Hurst and Tom Lynch.

I have even seen one umpire practically undressed on a ball field. I don't know if you remember Umpire Mannaseau. Anyway, I do.

One day in Washington, before the National league was cut down, Win Mercer got a bad decision from Umpire Mannaseau while pitching. The next afternoon Win—a great ballplayer, by the way—played third base.

There was a bad decision at third. To our amazement we saw Mercer grab Mannaseau by the coat sleeve and start pulling him down the baseline. He jerked and jerked, forcing the umpire toward second despite his protests and struggles. Win, a powerful man, was dragging him off the field, evidently. At second base Umpire Mannaseau braced his foot against the bag and pulled back. Mercer kept yanking and Mannaseau's blouse came off over his head—as one would skin a rabbit.

To the intense amusement of the crowd there stood the once dignified umpire in his undershirt. He gave up and walked across the field in that garb.

"What the devil are you trying to do?" some of us asked Mercer.

"I was going to take the big bum down to centerfield and throw him over the fence," he said.

It looked as if he had really started to do that very thing, too.

British Cabinet To Consider Debt Question Today

Believes Decision on U. S. Terms for Settlement Will Be Reached This Week.

London, January 30.—(By The Associated Press.)—Stanley Baldwin, chancellor of the exchequer, gave a full report of his debt funding mission in the United States to his colleagues at a cabinet council today.

The subject was discussed for an hour and a half, but no decision was reached, and the cabinet adjourned, to meet tomorrow to continue the discussion. It is considered almost certain that a final decision will be reached this week, first, because if the American terms are to be accepted a speedy decision is required in order to give the American congress time to take necessary action; and second, because the chancellor must prepare for his budget statement next March, and needs to know definitely how much he has to provide for the payment of interest to America.

It is understood there are practically only two alternatives before the cabinet—acceptance of the American terms, or allowing matters to drift and paying five per cent interest, hoping for some change in the conditions in the future. It is believed that the balance of opinion favors acceptance of the American terms.

House Approves Bill Calling for Changes In Consular Activities

Washington, January 30.—(Reorganization of the diplomatic and consular activities of the United States into the inter-changeable foreign service organization as sought by Secretary Hughes was approved today by the house foreign affairs committee, which reported the Rogers bill providing for consolidation of the two branches.

Complete interchange of personnel, a single revised salary scale, extra allowances to representatives at foreign capitals, thus eliminating the necessity of large private means for diplomatic officers, and extension of the civil service retirement act to the service are among the provisions of the bill. Increases in salaries would be authorized for many posts, chiefly for secretaries and lower officers, but the compensation of ministers and ambassadors would not be changed. Secretaries would be given salary increases from the present $8,000 to $9,000.

World Evangelization To Be Main Subject At Presbyterian Meet

Chattanooga, Tenn., January 30.—"World Evangelization" will be the subject considered at the regional meeting of the eighth biennial general convention of the laymen's missionary movement, Southern Presbyterian church, at Little Rock, Ark., February 15. It was announced from headquarters of the general assembly's stewardship committee here today. Conventions will also be held at five other regional centers, as follows: Houston, Texas, February 13-14; Jacksonville, Fla., February 20-21; Charlotte, N.C., February 22-23; Richmond, Va., February 27-28, and Huntington, W. Va., March 1-2. The same speakers will be heard in the six regional centers on successive dates. In 1921 at the seventh biennial convention there were 3,821 registered delegates and it is expected that 7,000 will attend this year.

"STOP BURGLARIES!" Police Instructed to "Call Undertaker If Necessary."

"These daylight burglaries have got to be stopped and even if you have to call an undertaker to do it I believe you will be justified," Captain J. E. Chandler instructed the early morning patrol of the Atlanta police department when it went on duty at midnight last night.

"It is bad enough," he told his men, "to have burglaries occur on your beats during the night but along after daybreak is no excuse for it."

The captain did not specifically instruct his men to shoot to kill but the instructions were that everything humanly possible must be done to break the recurrence of burglaries and hold-ups.

Large measure passed and conditions are becoming more normal. CHAPTER LXIX.
The Truth About Baker's.

It seemed to Cynthia that she sat for hours in the porch of that strange house in the wilderness, waiting for Margaret to come. When at last a carriage appeared in the driveway she was almost hysterical.

She flew down the steps and was her. A moment later Cynthia glanced up to see Brian Gysbert standing beside her.

"Do let me sit down and talk with you, please," he begged. "I must explain what happened the other day."

He was so polite that she forgot her fears.

"Oh, I'd rather you wouldn't," she exclaimed, drawing away. "Please, if we could just let the whole matter drop."

"That wouldn't be fair to me," he told her, gravely. "You must let me explain."

He began to talk, and as he went on Cynthia stared at him wide-eyed, unbelieving.

BORAH RENEWS FIGHT FOR ECONOMIC PARLEY

Senator Formally Introduces Proposal in Senate in Form of Separate Resolution.

Washington, January 30.—Senator Borah renewed in the senate today his proposal for an international economic conference called by President Harding.

The conference proposal which already has been the center of one senate storm and is expected to develop another, was submitted this time by the Idaho senator as a separate resolution, which at his own request immediately was laid aside for consideration after pending farm credits legislation is out of the way.

The conference proposal which already has been the center of one senate storm and is expected to develop another, was submitted this time by the Idaho senator as a separate resolution, which at his own request immediately was laid aside for consideration after pending farm credits legislation is out of the way.

In order to prevent any undue delay, however, Mr. Borah indicated that when the proper time came he probably would move to add the resolution as an amendment to some bill already under discussion.

It was emphasized at the white house again today that President Harding does not regard the calling of a world economic conference as a practical means of dealing with the European situation.

Had the president any thought that the calling of such a conference could accomplish any good, it was said authoritatively, an invitation from the United States would have been issued long ago.

It has been pointed out by high officials here repeatedly that the Belgian government made prolonged and careful inquiry beginning last August as to the possibilities of an economic conference and that the project for the holding of such a conference at Brussels was not abandoned until after the council of premiers met in London in December, only to find that there was little opportunity for reaching an agreement because of the directly opposed French and British views.

PARK DRIVERS WARNED

Must Not Halt Cars on Grass.

L. L. Wallis, general manager of parks, Tuesday issued a warning to drivers of motor vehicles to refrain from parking automobiles on grassy plots in the parks, stating that cases would be made against violators of this ordinance.

"We are endeavoring to beautify public parks of the city," declared Mr. Wallis, "and are greatly handicapped by untoward persons who park their machines off driveways on grassy plots. This leaves ruts on the soft plots and prevents the grass from growing evenly."

"Before making cases against persons violating this ordinance, I am giving them warning and appealing to their civic pride to help us make Atlanta's parks the most beautiful in the country."

TELLS RHEUMATICS TO BEGIN ON SALTS

A well-known authority states that stomach trouble and indigestion are nearly always due to acidity—acid stomach—and not, as most folks believe, from a lack of digestive juices. He states that an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach retards digestion and starts food fermentation; then our meals sour like garbage in a can, forming acid fluids and gases, which inflame the stomach like a toy balloon. We then get that heavy, lumpy feeling in the chest, we eructate sour food, belch gas or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, while it is effervescent, and furthermore, to continue this for one week. While relief often follows the first dose, it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salt is used by thousands of stomach sufferers with excellent results.—(adv.)

Help The Railroads Reduce The Death Rate From Accidents

More than 83,000 people are killed in the United States every year by accidents; and, of this number, less than 8 1/2% are killed by the railroads.

Automobiles head the list in taking this heavy toll of human life. Mining and quarrying accidents follow, in order, with heavier fatalities; and the innumerable, unclassified accidents of every-day occupations and pleasure pursuits kill more people than the railroads do.

While many accidents cannot be anticipated and provided against, a large percentage can be; and this is true of railroad accidents, particularly those involving automobiles and trucks.

There are fewer deaths every year from railroad accidents, because of the "Eternal Vigilance" on the part of the railroads to prevent accidents, and of the greater and more intelligent co-operation by the public. Let the good work go on.

How You Can Help

Stop! Look! Listen! at the railroad crossing. You might beat the engine and save two minutes of time; and you might fail to beat it and lose all the time you've got in this life. Time may be money, but there's not enough money in all the world to pay for lost life.

Don't use the railroad track as your right of way—it's not yours; it's private ground and on it you are a trespasser at your peril.

Don't get on or off a moving train; obey the rules of the road in this regard. Let the efficient and courteous officers and attendants direct and assist you from start to finish in railroad travel—that's what they are there for, and they know their business.

The L. & N. Railroad provides this protection—using a thorough system and all the modern facilities—and it asks and expects hearty co-operation from all its patrons.

Immediately!—your hair becomes beautiful! Just moisten a cloth with Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderine eradicates dandruff; invigorates the scalp, stopping itching and falling hair.

ETIQUETTE and ENTERTAINING By Mrs. Lydia Hoyt

(Copyright, 1923, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

All formal invitations are handwritten or engraved, but in either case the wording, which is always in the third person, and the form are the same. The formal invitation reads as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. Carrington Brown request the pleasure of (name) company at dinner on Wednesday the tenth of January at eight o'clock 500 Lake Shore Drive.

When formal invitations are engraved they should be on plain or plate marked matte Bristol board, and always white. Chests are used occasionally but monograms or addresses at the top are never used. The actual size and lettering are matters of personal preference, but the lettering should never be ornate. Only the letter "R" in R.s.v.p. should be capitalized.

When the words "at home" are both capitalized it is understood that the reception is to be very formal.

In America invitations to dinners, weddings and evening receptions are always in the name of both host and hostess but invitations to a ball, a dance, a tea or a garden party are in the name of the hostess only. Usually two sets of invitations are issued for a dinner-dance. An "at home" card with "dancing at eleven" in the left-hand corner is sent to those who are not invited to dine, and to the others is sent either a note or an engraved card with "dancing at eleven" in the corner.

Use of Word "Ball." Only a charity dance or a semi-public affair is called ball, and no lady ever invites you to a ball at her house. Usually she sends out an "at home" card with "dancing" in one corner, and the hour and the date alone are necessary. Or it may read:

Mr. and Mrs. Carrington Brown request the pleasure of (name) company at a small dance on Wednesday the eighth of February at ten o'clock 500 Lake Shore Drive R.s.v.p.

An invitation to a hotel should read the same with the exception of substituting "a dance" for "a small dance" and giving the name of the hotel instead of the house address. However, if the dance is given in honor of a debutante daughter or niece it should read:

Mr. and Mrs. Carrington Brown request the pleasure of (name) company at a dance in honor of their daughter Miss Gladys Brown on Tuesday evening the fifteenth of January at ten o'clock 500 Lake Shore Drive. The name of the hotel is substituted.

HOW TO SAVE WHEN SHOPPING

By Ruth Leigh
Author of "The Human Side of Retail Selling," "The ABC of Retailing," etc.

With special sales at this time of the year, many housewives are replenishing their supply of bed quilts. If you are buying a light-weight quilt, one that will be suitable for spring and perhaps summer use, the most practical one is the cotton-filled comforter. Many of those shown have pretty figured mill centers and cotton or sateen backs. If you want a comforter that will last a long time, avoid one with a mull covering. It is pretty, yes, but extremely perishable. In one season the mull will tear almost to shreds, and the cotton filling will come through. One blanket salesman said: "I seldom advise women to buy mull-covered comforters unless they're well off and can afford to have 'em last a short time. The mull is usually so thin you can put your big toe through it." Cotton-filled comforters, covered with sateen are strong and durable, but of course, heavy and perhaps not suitable for summer use.

A more useful covering for a comforter is known as silkoline, which is essentially a cotton fabric with a silky sheen to it. There are many different grades of silkoline, however, and some are such thin, coarse cottons that they are not worth buying. Be sure you get a good quality of silkoline. Of course wool-filled comforters are very warm, cozy and usually pretty to look at, but they are usually heavy and many housewives claim they add weight but not warmth. This is not strictly accurate, however; if the filling is of pure wool it should supply warmth. Down-filled comforters are charming and comfortable, but rather an expensive luxury. A sweet talk tomorrow about honey. (Copyright, 1923, for The Constitution.)

KEELY'S

There's a Springtime Newness
in These Charming

Suits and Wraps That Fills One With Delight

They are as smartly new and fresh as the daffodils that sunny days are bringing forth and one feels the same thrill of pleasure and charm at their loveliness.

Suits---Two and Three-Piece Models

Beautiful are the new materials of Cordine, Shanteen, Piquette, Covert Twill, Twillcord Paye and other fabrics in Tweed-like sports materials.

The Colors, besides many smart models in black and navy, are the very popular greys, and new shades of browns and tans.

In Three-Piece Suits are shown the most pleasing color combinations—black and grey, navy and grey, tan and brown, and others.

Fancy Coats are elaborately braided all over in self or contrasting color—some with silver or gilt threads. Very attractive are others in quite new beaded designs of beautiful colorings.

Separate Blouses are an unusual feature with many of the three-piece suits—beautiful over-blouses of crepe in solid or fancy designs very smartly fashioned and often with a long girdle. These, of course, may be worn without the coat—making really two costumes of one.

Two-Piece Suits are shown with the smartest of plainly tailored coats or with the pretty braided coats. Models are plain, full back straight lines, or with the blouse back, caught at a low waist line with some quaint ornament or buckle.

Sports Suits in the lighter shades are shown in Kasha cloth and many pretty weaves in the Tweed effects—quite plain or with charming wool embroideries.

Wraps---Coats and Capes

The new wraps present delightfully varied styles and models for choosing. There are coats, capes and wraps that are a happy combination of the two! New fabrics are most attractive in weave and colorings.

There is Juina cloth, the new Piquette, Twillcord and Purltwill, and Milanelle and other handsome soft pile fabrics.

As to Colors—The new greys are very much in evidence—blacks are good, of course—navy blues, and lovely new shades in browns.

Handsome Coats are shown in very full, beautifully draped models, all of self material.

Very stunning are the new coats in blouse effects, semi-fitting at the waist, with quite elaborate braidings of self color or colors to contrast. Most of the models are quite long.

Wraps and wrappy coats are shown in both the twill and the pile fabrics and charming indeed are the models showing great originality of design with quite unusual braidings or embroideries.

Capes are very long and of generously enveloping design—some with very smart little collars of caracul.

Sport Coats that come just to the hips are very new and attractive in white or black, usually combined with bright colors.

Mrs. Poindexter Writes Of Capital's 'Social Lobby'

Wife of Senator Causes Stir With "Personal Glimpses" Sent to Pacific Coast Newspaper.

Constitution Bureau

Raleigh Hotel.
Washington, January 30.—(By Constitution Bureau Wire.)—Washington society has been set agog by the republication this week of a series of articles written for a Seattle paper by Mrs. Miles Poindexter, wife of the senator from Washington, and dealing with intimate glimpses of official life.

Not since the publication of the "Mirrors of Washington," has such a furor been created in congressional circles, which is usually reticent about giving public utterance to drawing-room gossip. Mrs. Poindexter's extreme frankness in writing her impressions, gained from several years residence at the capital, has resulted in a storm of protest, and in some instances repudiation of the statements made.

While it has been whispered about in exclusive circles for some time that intimate comments on local affairs were being published on the Pacific coast, not until this week have copies of the paper been brought to public attention through the prominence of newspapers at the capital.

Mrs. Poindexter comments caustically at times on the different social aspects of senators and cabinet members' wives, for one thing being unable to understand "how the senators are so liberal with the secretaries (of the cabinet) and so ungenerous with themselves."

In this she refers to the action of the senate in granting appropriations for the various executive departments and at the same time neglecting its own needs.

Denby Is Honored.

Particular attention is given Secretary Denby, of the navy department, who she says has one of the choicest assignments of the cabinet, enabling him to take his family to the Orient in one of "those fine small boats that go about in the waters near here."

And giving the secretary's wife the use of "a band to furnish the music for her functions," when she "has her days at home."

Mrs. Poindexter also writes of the failure of Secretary Denby to carry out his promise to campaign in Washington for Senator Poindexter, who was defeated in the November election, going on to say the senator, as acting chairman of the naval affairs committee, had been fighting the navy's battles in congress for a long time. She records that while denigrating papers were harping on Senator Poindexter's vote to seat Newberry the navy chiefs were very busy elsewhere.

"I suppose there is much real work in any of these offices," she wrote in one of her articles, referring to cabinet posts, "but if I were choosing, I think I would ask to be made secretary in the navy because there seems to be much that goes with it. An automobile with a driver, the use of those fine small boats that go about in the waters near here, and the opportunity to take one's family on wonderful trips, such as the one Secretary Denby and his family took to the Orient last summer, and besides all these things when the secretary's wife has her 'days at home' she can have a band to furnish the music for her functions."

"The result of the denigrating furishes flowers for the house of the secretary of the department of agriculture on all occasions. And the war department furnishes the good looking officers for functions given by the secretary of war and so on."

She began by criticizing the senate appropriations committee for furnishing automobiles for secretaries without doing as much for themselves. In an article written about a week ago she said in part:

"I never could see why the senators were so liberal with the secretaries. I don't believe a secretary should have an automobile any more than a senator because senators have to do considerable canvassing while a secretary's work is in his office."

Most of the persons referred to in the articles have refused to make comment. Marine officers, however, have stated hastily that he marine band rendered special service to the wife of the secretary of the navy, stating that the band is always ready to assist any semi-official function, especially members of congress.

While Secretary Denby declined to discuss the reference to his failure to campaign for Senator Poindexter, his friends stated hastily that he was held in Washington during the campaign on official matters and had been detained on urgent business relating to naval affairs.

Secretary Weeks of the war department was the only cabinet official to make a statement. Declining to discuss the article as a whole, Mr. Weeks said "the statement that the war department furnished good-looking officers at functions given by the secretary of war" was not true.

Secretary Weeks also declined to discuss the articles but has given the impression that they have been distasteful to him.

STORY OF ARDMORE MURDERS RELATED AT NEW HEARING

Ardmore, Okla., January 30.—Statements said to have been made by Jeff Smith, of Healdton, that he was forced by masked men to accompany them on a night raid at the home of Joe Carroll in Wilton in December, 1922, during which Carroll was slain and two alleged members of the band fatally wounded, were related in district court here today in the trial on a charge of murder.

The defendant is one of the eleven prominent Carter county citizens charged with abetting the band. The statements attributed to Smith as to his participation in the expedition were repeated on the stand by county officers who arrested him and by the widow of his brother, John Smith, of Wilton, who was mortally wounded in the attack.

Carroll's widow, Her 17-year-old son, Walter Carroll, a brother, and Herman Hensley, who testified he was visiting Joe Carroll when the band raided his home, repeated much of Mrs. Carroll's story.

When court recessed tonight the prosecution had called all its witnesses and the defense possibly one, whom County Attorney John L. Hodge said he might place on the stand tomorrow.

It was completed this afternoon after more than a day and a half devoted to examination of prospective jurors, particularly by the state to test the improved quality of the jury. The state also presented the Ku Klux Klan and other secret organizations.

Ten Students Helped At Emory University By Beck Loan Fund

The Lewis H. Beck educational loan fund is going to have a marked influence on the development of Georgia, was the statement Tuesday of Joseph A. McCord, one of the trustees, in announcing the Emory students aided by the fund have received excellent ratings for the first term during which they have been using the Beck fund money. Five of them are in the medical school.

In making his $50,000 gift to help educate Emory students, Mr. Beck, retired Atlanta merchant, specified that every applicant must be examined as to mental capacity and physical fitness. "Mr. Beck wants to help educate men who can make themselves useful for good in Georgia," Mr. McCord stated.

A similar fund of $50,000 established for the University of Georgia by former Governor Joseph E. Brown in 1883 has grown from payments and interest to $285,000 this year, Mr. McCord stated. "In 40 years we expect the Beck fund to equal that in growth and to be available to 50 or 60 promising Georgia youths each year."

Only the interest on the money is loaned and students pay it back after graduation. The $50,000 has been invested in approved bonds of Georgia counties and municipalities, paying $2,500 interest.

A fund of $25,000 has been established by Mr. Beck for similar use at Georgia Tech.

Operatic Star Sings Praises Of Emile Coue

Mary Garden Declares She Sings "Better and Better Every Day."

Boston, Mass., January 30.—(Special.)—Singing masters may soon think of quitting the business if M. A. Coue enters the field of voice production.

Mary Garden, who is here with the Chicago Opera company, does not say this in so many words but her enthusiasm for the Coue method leads one to infer it. She called a room full of visitors to witness that as a result of repeating a variant of the day by day formula she has improved her voice "a hundred per cent."

"Day by day I am singing better and better," she repeats when she retires to her couch at night and when she gets up in the morning, she declares that the results are "marvelous" and she has only been practicing auto suggestion a month.

"Even the old fogies," she criticizes the method, have been sincere enough to notice the improved quality of my voice," said Miss Garden. "So it must be true."

Was Despondent.
Miss Garden was seriously uneasy and despondent a month ago when bronchial trouble had almost compelled her to cancel her singing engagements. There was no evidence of Bostonian sedateness at all after she lectured this afternoon, apparently irresistible personality had had an opportunity to exercise its persuasive powers. The 2,000 people present swarmed into the street and surrounded her automobile, waving hands and blocking the way for five minutes. Auto suggestions as a healer of marriage troubles seems to be something in which Boston is specializing. In hotel lounges, in the streets and the crowds at the lecture hall, several men and women have been telling their friends, "You know we are getting happier and happier since we caught the Coue idea," or the same thing in other words. It was said quite seriously, too, though with contented smiles.

During the day Coue has been questioned a lot by newspaper men and other callers. Several asked him if auto suggestion can cure drunkenness and broken hearts. However, Coue told them that both are quite curable, but added cautiously, "Drunkards are not always willing to be cured. I have only met with one in America. Exactly what he meant by the latter part of the phrase was not disclosed.

Coue speaks tonight and again tomorrow morning before going to New Haven.
